Q2

What types of cases should the investigative organization investigate? Please select all that apply.

- Fatal shootings,
 - All lethal use of force cases,
 - Serious bodily harm,
 - Sexual assault cases,
 - In-custody deaths

Q3

If the investigative body investigates more than lethal force cases, what cases should be prioritized? e.g. lethal force

I think that the agency should have discretion and criteria to determine priorities. All the types of cases listed above are important.

Q4

Should the investigative body investigate only the use of force incident or should they look at all of the events surrounding the incident, such as the stop, etc.?

ALL THE EVENTS leading up to the incident!

Q5

What should the investigative body report on? Please select all that apply.

- Use of force incident reports,
 - Data on use of force incidents in the state,
 - Recommendations for policy changes based on incidents or patterns
 - Other (please specify):
Officers involved in multiple shootings/critical incidents

Q6

What powers or authority should be vested in the investigative agency? Please select all that apply.

The same authority as a fully commissioned law enforcement officer

Access to administrative records from the responsible law enforcement agency

Other (please specify):

EVERYTHING needed to conduct thorough and objective investigations.

Q7

Do you have any other recommendations?

Would be great if the agency could also have a section that reviews the internal administrative investigations that departments do of their critical incidents, such as the reports that OLEO did on Tommy Le and Mi'Chance Dunlap-Gittens shootings.

Q3
If the investigative body investigates more than lethal force cases, what cases should be prioritized? e.g. lethal force
If it is the policy of the state to conduct investigations of any sort, they should not place one investigation at a higher level of importance than another. The investigative body must be staffed sufficient to meet the demands of the task and the expectations of the public.

Q4
Should the investigative body investigate only the use of force incident or should they look at all of the events surrounding the incident, such as the stop, etc.?
The investigators should be only investigating the involved officer(s) and keep focused to the matter at hand. The public expects police officers to be on the job. The longer these investigations take, or the more they include, the more disruptive it will be to staffing and the provision of public safety services.

Q5 Other (please specify):
What should the investigative body report on? Please select all that apply.
The body should not report on any of it. To be a truly independent entity any "reporting" should be done through the work of a third party. The investigative body should not be conducting any politically driven reporting on its work.

Q3

If the investigative body investigates more than lethal force cases, what cases should be prioritized? e.g. lethal force

It would make sense to prioritize cases lethal cases, yes.

Deadly force > in-custody deaths > serious bodily harm > sexual assault

Q4

Should the investigative body investigate only the use of force incident or should they look at all of the events surrounding the incident, such as the stop, etc.?

There ought to be reasonable guidance to allow the lead investigator some flexibility. If they find that circumstances dictate a need to look at prior events, then the scope ought to include that but a justification needs to be provided/demonstrated.

Q5

What should the investigative body report on? Please select all that apply.

Q6

What powers or authority should be vested in the investigative agency? Please select all that apply.

Search warrant authority ONLY,

Q7

Do you have any other recommendations?

The investigators should have access to the same level of information as law enforcement. If a detective would look at X information for an alleged crime, there's no reason the investigative agency should not be able to pull the same type of information on law enforcement. EG: Social media, administrative history, etc.

Q3

If the investigative body investigates more than lethal force cases, what cases should be prioritized? e.g. lethal force

Fatal shootings, lethal use of force and in-custody death should be given equal priority. After that, serious or substantial bodily harm should be next. However, our work should culminate in a statute that is consistent with other statutory definitions. RCWs use the term "Substantial bodily harm" means bodily injury which involves a temporary but substantial disfigurement, or which causes a temporary but substantial loss or impairment of the function of any bodily part or organ, or which causes a fracture of any bodily part. RCW 9a.04.110

Q4

Should the investigative body investigate only the use of force incident or should they look at all of the events surrounding the incident, such as the stop, etc.?

All events surrounding the incident must be investigated in use of force investigations because they may indicate motive.

Q5

What should the investigative body report on? Please select all that apply.

Data on use of force incidents in the state,
Recommendations for policy changes based on incidents or patterns

Other (please specify):

The investigative body should focus on investigating the incident. Providing data and recommendations is important, but secondary

Q6

What powers or authority should be vested in the investigative agency? Please select all that apply.

The same authority as a fully commissioned law

Q7

Do you have any other recommendations?

I'm wondering if the task force might consider a different direction than creating a new investigative agency. We may achieve similar results, from less costly change by creating an independent agency that is given authority to review use of force investigations for independence and credibility? This wouldn't be the big change that we all have been talking about, but it may be a more efficient way to improve public trust, create consistent standards and possibly improve outcomes.

Q3

If the investigative body investigates more than lethal force cases, what cases should be prioritized? e.g. lethal force
Officer-involved use of deadly force and alleged serious criminal police misconduct.

Q4

Should the investigative body investigate only the use of force incident or should they look at all of the events surrounding the incident, such as the stop, etc.?

The investigative body must be accountable for completing comprehensive, professional criminal investigations to inform any determination of whether the use of deadly force met the good faith standard established in RCW 9A.16.040; and satisfied other applicable laws, and/or fully presents the facts concerning the alleged serious criminal misconduct/behavior. Completed investigations by the investigative body must be provided to the appropriate prosecutor(s) for examination and thus any charging decision.

It will be critically important for this specialized investigative unit/organization to remain focused on this limited scope and ensure transparency, trust, and flexibility to adapt to future changes.

Q5

What should the investigative body report on? Please select all that apply.

Use of force incident reports,

Data on use of force incidents in the state,

Other (please specify):

1). The State should work to establish a mandatory statewide Use of Force (UOF) reporting system for agencies, so we have accurate timely data. 2). The State should establish a Community Advisory Panel (Governor appointed panel) to which the Investigative Body provides timely overviews of current case status, findings of completed cases, and an annual roll-up of demographic and detailed information regarding UOF cases statewide.

Q6

What powers or authority should be vested in the investigative agency? Please select all that apply.

The same authority as a fully commissioned law enforcement officer

Access to administrative records from the responsible law enforcement agency

Other (please specify):

They must have the full legal authority within the State of Washington to carry out all aspects of their specific, identified mission.

Q7

Do you have any other recommendations?

The investigative body should be designed with a limited scope: Effectively and proficiently conducting investigations involving officer-involved use of deadly force and alleged serious criminal police misconduct.

This investigative body should not be responsible for conducting administrative investigations.

The investigative body should be assembled with experienced commissioned law enforcement officers (with credentials from Washington State Criminal Justice Training Commission), forensic scientists, and civilians with clearly defined roles, and with the full legal authority within the State of Washington to fulfill all aspect of its specific, identified mission.

Can't say until the actual organizational structure of the investigative agency is initially determined - whatever structure it should assure the results provide "all" of the aspects of Kipling's 6 Honest Serving Men (what, who, when, where, why and how).

Do you have any other recommendations?

The independent investigative agency and its processes and procedures need to be supported by concurrent changes to all of the other impacting law & justice variables that need to be considered in this "change model" - RCWs, county codes, municipal codes, policy and procedures at the city and municipal level, sentencing guidelines, court processes and procedures, prosecutorial adjustments, law enforcement practices and policies "in the trenches/at the street level", etc., et al. To change just one part of the justice system and not recognize that "every" other part of the law, justice and corrections continuum is/will be impacted in some way, will only make for short-term/interim change to the overall justice system - and over a period of time even the brand new change will become ineffective due to the impacts of the other variables not being changed concurrently at the same time. This is a basic principle in organizational change theory - check it out - we need to at least point out this need within the end of task recommendations we're making to the legislature - Otherwise they are only going to look at the fiscal cost of implementing this new investigative process and little else - tell me that this isn't the case?

Q3

If the investigative body investigates more than lethal force cases, what cases should be prioritized? e.g. lethal force

I feel this question is asking us to limit the scope of this investigative body, when we were tasked with coming up with recommendations to the governor on how to appropriately address independent investigations. Given the answer to the previous question, I believe this independent investigative body should be given the authority, responsibility and resources to conduct all of those types of investigations, not limit it to one or another type of investigation.

Q4

Should the investigative body investigate only the use of force incident or should they look at all of the events surrounding the incident, such as the stop, etc.?

I believe the investigative body should investigate all of the events surrounding the the use of force incident, including what lead to the stop in the first place to determine whether it was necessary. I don't believe the investigative body should investigate any crime that was alleged to have occurred that caused the interaction with police to occur, but I do think the investigative body should look into the events that led up to the use of force to determine whether it was reasonable and necessary. The investigative body should also investigate any criminal conduct allegedly committed by an officer/officers that occurred after the use of force, e.g., planting of evidence, false statements, intimidating witnesses, etc.

Q3

If the investigative body investigates more than lethal force cases, what cases should be prioritized? e.g. lethal force

If the agency is resources and funded in an appropriate way, it shouldn't have to prioritize and instead should be able to investigate all the types of cases it is charged with investigating.

Q4

Should the investigative body investigate only the use of force incident or should they look at all of the events surrounding the incident, such as the stop, etc.?

Generally, the agency should focus on the use of force incident. It should not be investigating whether the preceding stop (or criminal trespass, burglary, or whatever alleged crime) occurred and constituted a crime, but should be looking at all the circumstances and conditions leading up to the UOF incident. It should also look into any criminal misconduct that grows from the UOF incident (e.g. intimidating witnesses or falsifying statements).

Q5

What should the investigative body report on? Please select all that apply.

Use of force incident reports,

Data on use of force incidents in the state,

Recommendations for policy changes based on incidents or patterns

Other (please specify):

I'm generally in favor of data, transparency, and identification of patterns/systemic issues. However, I also believe that asking the agency to report on ALL use of force incidents may be overly ambitious. It might make more sense to focus reporting on the UOF included in the agency's jurisdiction, at least initially.

Q6

What powers or authority should be vested in the investigative agency? Please select all that apply.

Other (please specify):

I believe the agency should be able to access administrative records, subpoena records, and have power to apply enough leverage necessary to obtain the information and evidence it needs. I am having trouble answering this question without more information. For example, what powers does the criminal investigation unit at the AGO have?
